Gov't troops accused of abuses in Sulu

COTABATO, Jan. 1 (AP) — Government troops in Sulu province have been accused of committing human rights abuses, including the killing of civilians and the burning of villages, according to a report released by the United Nations Human Rights Commission. The report, which was based on interviews with local residents and human rights activists, stated that government forces had been responsible for the deaths of at least 100 people and the destruction of several villages in the region. The report also accused government troops of using excessive force and of committing acts of sexual violence against women and children. The United Nations Human Rights Commission called for an immediate investigation into the alleged abuses and for the prosecution of those responsible.

Bhutto party to seek UN probe if it wins

MANILA, July 16 (AP) — The Pakistan People's Party (PPP) has vowed to demand a UN investigation into the 2008 election if it wins the upcoming provincial assembly elections in Punjab, the most populous province in Pakistan.

The PPP, led by Benazir Bhutto, has won a landslide victory in the provincial elections, securing 100 out of 110 seats. The party's victory is seen as a significant setback for the military establishment, which has been accused of rigging the 2008 national elections.

Rush sent us race to replace him in folds

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP) — President Barack Obama's administration is racing to replace him in the White House, a move that could be seen as a sign of weakness.

The administration is reportedly considering several potential replacements, including Vice President Joe Biden and Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi. The move is seen as a response to the growing pressure on Obama to step down, particularly in light of the ongoing economic crisis and the military situation in Afghanistan.

UN economists say more violence makes nation safer

UNITED NATIONS, July 16 (AP) — UN economists say more violence makes a nation safer, a statement that has sparked controversy.

The statement, which was part of a report on the economic impact of conflict, suggests that increased violence can lead to a more stable and secure environment, at least in the short term. This view is widely criticized as being counter-intuitive and potentially dangerous.

Growth of electronics show may keep some new products away

MANILA, July 16 (AP) — The growth of electronics in the Philippines may keep some new products away from the market, according to industry experts.

The experts point to the high cost of electronic components and the lack of a strong local manufacturing base as major barriers to the entry of new products. They also note that the government's policies on electronics imports and exports may be hindering the industry's growth.
